

Liner Becomes Restaurant

An ocean liner that formerly carried passengers from Vancouver to Alaska ports, is now undergoing a major conversion in Los Angeles Harbor that will make the vessel one of the Southland's finest restaurants. Opening is scheduled for mid-summer. Workmen are in the midst of a $400,000 project on the 45-year-old 330-foot luxury liner Princess Louise which will result in a restaurant capable of accommodating 1,100 patrons at one time. State rooms are being converted into dining rooms and cocktail lounges, and decorated under the watchful direction of Ray Wallace of Palos Verdes. Work also is under way on installation of three gas-equipped kitchens, and a gas air conditioning system which will serve all public areas is being readied for operation.

Charles G. Sutton, president of the Princess Louise Corp., said the floating restaurant will feature about two dozen basic items and daily specialties. The specialties will make every meal an unusual adventure to some different part of the world, Sutton said. For more than 40 years, the Princess Louise carried thousands of passengers between Vancouver, B.C., and Skagway, Alaska. Later, she shuttled between Vancouver, B.C., and Victoria Island. Earlier this year, the vessel was acquired by the Princess Louise Corp. from its original owner, Canadian Pacific Railway, and was tugged from Vancouver to its new berth in the Los Angeles Harbor, across the channel from Ports O'Call Village.

FLOATING RESTAURANT . . . Workmen currently are converting the 330-foot luxury liner Princess Louise, shown here on her arrival in Los Angeles Harbor, into a restaurant capable of serving 1,100 customers at one time. Opening of the restaurant is scheduled later this summer.

A boy in business for himself doesn't worry about summer jobs

Or fall jobs, or winter jobs, for that matter. Because the boy with a newspaper route—a junior independent merchant—has a year 'round income. The few hours he puts in each week not only provide monetary returns but the even more significant dividends of learning how free enterprise operates.

The business of learning the value of money, of keeping books, collecting, buying at wholesale and selling at retail is important. But not even money can buy the other skills acquired from route experience—learning to deal pleasantly with people, for instance, or the value of punctuality.

Your newspaperboy is learning all the time. His route experience helps him acquire the intangible skills so necessary for success both socially and professionally. He makes money at it, too.

Only about one boy in ten gets the opportunity to have a newspaper route. If you think your son or some other youngster might profit by newspaperboy route experience, why not suggest that he come in and talk to us.
